Ninety-third Birthday Anniversary of Mrs. Catherine Arthur Celebrated.

Mrs. Catherine Arthur Celebrated.

Special Correspondence.

St. John. Tovele Co., March 31.—On Friday afternoon most everybody in St. John together with many from Ciover Creek and from Center met in the new school house at St. John to celebrate the ninety-third birthday of Mrs. Catherine Arthur. There was a large gathering of family relatives children, grand and great-grandchildren. A sunpuous dinner was provided, and amile justice done the same by upwards of sixty guests. After the tables were cleared a program was rendered, with a dinner and dance for the children. In the evening the older people indulged in the dance until a late hour. The affair was an enjoyable one particularly to Sister Arthur, who at the age of 31 years enjoys life's pleasures as much as any of the younger tooks.

Special Correspondence. Fillmore, Millard County, March 31.—
The drynes of the spring and the small amount of snow in the mountains is quite discourgaing to the farmers and stockmen of Millard county, and Fillmore takes on her full share of the depression. Still, a fine large brick business house has recently been eracted that south of Cabriel Business house has ness house has recently been effected just south of Gabriel Huntsman's hotel, which, together with the recently finished district school house, shows that Fillmore is abreast of the times, especially in its educational efforts.

SHEEP ARE LOOKING WELL.

Thousands of sheep are being driven Thousands of sheep are being driven north to the shearing camps and the sheepmen are jubilant over their prospects in the wool and sheep business generally. The herds are in splendid condition, very little loss of wool from scab is reported. A few cases of disease has appened among them, which causes their heads and ears to swell, but pathing to excite elarm. but nothing to excite alarm.

CROWING THE CORN CROP.

Prize Paper Outlining Methods of a Successful Indiana Corn Grower, Thorough Preparation of the Soil-Plant When Soil is Warm-Cultivation - Harvesting.

The following is the paper on corn growing which won the $25 prize for he best essay on that subject offered by the Practical Farmer, Philadelphia. The author, J. J. Hickman, is a large corn grower of central Indiana, and while conditions for corn growing in Utah are not so favorable as in the Hoosier State, Mr. Hickman's methods are ahead of most Utah farm work, and if followed, would result in better crops of corn. He says:

We follow a three year rotation of clover, corn or potatoes and wheat. We break the land about 8 inches deep and try to go a little deeper every time the try to go a little deeper every time the operate the machine and four land is plowed. Our fields are long and teams, three teams to deliver the parrow; we begin plowing at the outparrow; we begin plowing at the outside one year finishing at the center, then next time the field is plowed begin at center, and by a little care we finish at the outside with practically no loss of time, and have no dead furrows; also keep the land level. We follow the plow each day with harrow or drag, as the soil pulverizes and levels much eas-ier when fresh than if it were left for some days; moisture is also retained. After plowing is done the harrow and drag or roller are set to work and the soil made fine and mellow. We have no set number of times to harrow, but stay at it till the seed bed is right. We use the spring tooth harrow and a drag or board float to prepare the seed bed. I have also used the disk harrow before plowing and am sure it paid well. This was on blue grass sod. It was cut both ways in small lands and made the plowing much easier for the team. The underside was harrowed as well as the top. As stated above, we always try to have our corn after clover. The clovto have our corn after clover. The clover is either pastured with sheep and young cattle or cut for hay, or if hay is not needed badly, is clipped and left to be turned under. We like the plan of pasturing with sheep, as they do not injure the land by trumping, which is the objection to pasturing with heavy stock. We have never used fertilizer other than stable manure. With this we cover as large an area as possible each year, putting it on the young clover and sometimes on the clover sod. WHEN TO PLANT.

From the first to the fifteenth of May we consider a good time to plant corn. The ground is usually warm enough by the first of May to sprout enough by the first of May to sprout the seed quickly, thus insuring vigorous growth—this is what we want. If planted too early the plants usually come up sickly and yellow and never give the best results. Also the cut worm gets in his-work sometimes. For a number of years we have made it a practice to begin planting from the 5th to the 12th of May and see no reason to change now. son to change now.

PLANTING AND CULTIVATING. We use the checkrower and prefer t to planting in drills Have tried both to planting in drilla. Have tried both methods with good success, but think we can keep the land leveler by plowing both ways. We desire this on account of sowing wheat after the corn, which we always do. We do not object to the plan of drilling, as some of our best crops have been grown in drills. Have used most a shoe planter with concave wheels which firms the soil over and about the sed. The shoes are run three inches deep, sometimes a litrun three inches deep, sometimes a lit-tle more. If drilling, should like a fur-row opened about 4 inches below surrow opened about a inches below surface, covering corn only 116 inches, then filing furrow gradually by the after cultivation which begins immediately after planting. The corn is always harrowed before it comes up or while coming up, unless bad weather prevents. This does not injure the corn soil is not too heavy. We use a riding cultivator with three shovels on a side, use narrow shovels, run deep the first two plowings which are done as early as possible. After the second cultiva-tion with cultivator the gangs are raised to go only three inches deep This upper three inches is then stirred This upper three inches is then stirred each week, or oftener is possible, till the corn is too large for the cultivator to be run with safety to the corn. My cultivator is fitted with spring trip which I consider a vast improvement over the old pin break. We think it best to cultivate often till done and then cuit, but don't get done too soon We now cut all our corn, husk and shred the fedder by machinery. The corn is cut with a one-horse sled cutter requiring two men to operate. Myter requiring two men to operate. My-self and hand have cut and set up 206 shocks 10 hills square in one day. We shocks 10 hills square in one day. We begin in the middle of shock row, cutting out the middle rows; when a good horse is stopped and while one man holds both bunches the other ties the tops together with butts well spread out. This makes enough foundation for the shock if the balance of the corn is set up evenly around it and well tied. We begin cutting as soon as the grain s solid enough to not mold in shock or when lower leaves turn yellow. As soon as fodder is cured so that it will not mold when put in bulk after being shredded, we begin husking, using the husker and shredder combined. The husked corn is elevated into the wagon bed and the fodder shredded and everyated to the mow or stack

SAVING SEED.

Our seed corn is selected in the fall just before the corn is cut, as we desire to see the kind of stalk, the height of the ear from the ground and the way it hangs. The requirements are that the grain shall be pure yellow, slighlty dented, red cob, straight rows and filled out to the ends; the stalk strong and stocky, the ear growing about 41/2 feet from ground, and turned down at the point. We save twice as much as we wish to plant and store in a dry out-building, laying it on boards one layer deep till thoroughly dry; it is then sacked and hung to rafters by wires to keep vermin out. Have never had poor seed corn when kept as described. Good seed corn may be easily told by the seed corn may be easily told by the clean, healthy appearance of the germ after one is accustomed to examination of both good, and bad seed. We have often tested in pots and have always found a very small per cent of poor grains in our seed corn, while corn from the crib tested in the same way would show as much as 50 per cent poor grains. This is not always the case, however.

VALUE OF SHREDDED FODDER. The corn folder in this section where saved and shredded is worth nearly as much as the corn would have sold for at husking time. Some baled shredded fodder brought at public sale near here. seven dollars per ton. The feeding value of good shredded fodder is equal to, if not better than timothy hay, which brings now ten dollars per ton in mow.

The subject of corn stover was brought up at our Farmers' Institute at New Castle, where the speaker and farmers of our county who have tried shredded fodder agreed that the corn stover was equal in feeding value to best timothy hay and clover. It is fed in mangers to the horses and cattle and handles easily with a fork. What it handles easily with a fork. What lit-tle waste there is makes excellent bed-ling and is a splendid absorbent fing and is a splendid absorbent.

On some of the river bottom farms and black land and other very rich soils the question of disposing of stalk fields used to be an item. They were poled down, raked and burned. We have not had any stalk fields for several years. When we did have them they were pastured only when the tround was either dry or frozen hard. One of my near neighbors who has rich bottom land, grows corn year after bottom land, grows corn year after year on the same land and cuts the statks in short lengths turning all unand gives us quite the advantage of the weeds. Have harrowed corn without injury and with much benefit after it was 3 or 4 inches high. The weeder

A Combination Has Been Formed by the Athletic Clubs of San Francisco.

The managers of the leading athletic clubs which promote prize fighting in San Francisco, have formed a combination to prevent ruinous competition. They declare, however, that they have not organized a slugging trust. In view of the fact that ring contests are to be prohibited in New York, they think that many pugilists of reputation will soon come to this coast. The main points agreed upon by the managers, for First, not to bid against each other for fights; second, to reduce the size of purses, and third, in case of a palpaole fake, to declare the bout "no con-lest," and donate the amount to some
